Katherine Field & Associates (KFA) has worked with clients from coast to coast, earning a distinguished reputation. Based in Newport, Rhode Island, this award-winning landscape architecture firm transforms residential and commercial properties with personalized, highly creative, functional designs.

"KFA specializes in custom design as it relates to each client and their interests, tastes, and lives," says the firm's CCO, Katherine Field. "Each water feature, fire pit, entrance gate, etcetera. is designed one-of-a-kind, specifically for that client." Field notes that Cape Cod's well-known architectural style gives many homes and businesses distinctive features that need to be incorporated into each landscape design. The firm is well known throughout coastal communities for creating designs that reflect the beauty and diversity of seaside environments.

Field says that homeowners working on new or remodeling projects should involve landscape professionals early in the overall planning process—just as they would involve their architect or their contractor. "This way, any potential problems can be avoided early on, and the landscape design can be infused with the building design," Field explains. "Working with contractors provides a more holistic approach to problem solving and facilitates a team environment for creative solutions."

Each KFA project is undertaken with the understanding that a professionally designed landscape should be a place where people can "connect to the natural world and redefine home to include nature," Field explains, stressing the importance of harmony between each home's interior and exterior spaces.

The combination of experienced, creative, and well-trained designers and architects on the KFA team provides each homeowner with a beautiful customized landscape that will endure and provide pleasure for years to come.
